

SAINT FOR THE JOURNAL

Pope Pius IX, Fifty Years Ago, selected St. Francis de Sales as Their Patron.

It will be news to many journalists to learn that they have an officially selected patron saint. But the Manchester Guardian points out that they have, and have had for the last fifty years. Pius IX, at the request of a number of continental journalists, issued a decree on the point. He recommended journalists to seek the help of St. Francis de Sales, whose body has just lately been transferred, with great pomp and amidst popular rejoicing, to a new church at Annecy, in Savoy, his native place. The choice, our contemporary thinks, was an apt one, for St. Francis was a man of letters. His famous work, "The Devout Life," is still popular, "no doubt because of the lightness of touch with which it is written and the unerring journalistic instinct (if one may put it so) in writing of the work of a saint) with which he compels attention to serious questions by the skillful use of anecdote and illustration."—Westminster Gazette.

Explosive Sub.

A well-trusted man was hurrying along the Rue du Passey, Paris, when he slipped, and falling forward dashed his elbow through the window of a wine-shop. The proprietor rushed out to claim the price of his window as a large crowd gathered to see the play. The man who had broken the glass protested that he had no money. "Search him!" shouted some in the crowd. There were no policemen about, so the wineshop keeper and a few friends took the law into their own hands, searched the man's pockets and found a £20 note.

The crowd advised the wineshop keeper to pay himself well for his broken window. He took £2 to pay for his broken glass, and the unpopular man who had broken it went away with a ten cent coat and £18 change. The £20 note was a forgery.

Those "Iron Dollars."

"I have always felt that we of the middle west have about the best or everything in the United States," a Missouri man who is in New York said. "But I am willing to admit now that we play the part of the 'goat' in the currency deal."

"You will never know the significance of the term 'iron dollars' until you have carried the big wheels around in your pocket," he continued. "And you will doubtless never carry the cumbersome coin as long as the good-natured western brother consents to deal with that part of the currency. In the two months that I have been in the east I haven't had my hands on an 'iron dollar,' and I'm not homesick for the sight of one. When I return I am going to try to carry enough paper to last me until I come back again."

Star Disc Harrow

The bearings in the disc harrow are provided with wood bushings. As a result all weight rests upon these wood parts which cost but little and are easily renewed if damaged.

Owing to the accessibility to the bearings they won't dry. You take out the oil plug, clean the bottom of the weight boxes, the most accessible place, put in oil, and fill the oil ducts—they hold a lot of oil, too, then screw the top on. The feed is just right and the harrow will run easily with the weight down for a long time. These oil ducts are simply holes cast in the standards, the lower ends of which form the top sections of the bearing. It is a simple and effective arrangement.

Don't mind the scrapers—they are one of the fine points of the harrow, a feature defective in this respect, though perfect in every other, is often useless. Remove one of them and examine those on the Castle Star. They are made to sweep across the faces of the discs from end to end, the outer edges, and each blade has a pressure spring to hold it firmly against the disc and yet let it rock.

If you prefer an open star harrow can be supplied with a seed attachment for broadcasting or seeding, or as good as the others, too.

The privilege is absolutely free.

A GOOD TIME ON "THE TRAIL"

PLENTY OF FUN BOOKED AT
TULSA, OCT. 22-NOV. 1.

Amusement Section of Dry-Farming
Congress Named For Noted
Author.

Like every other world's fair and great exposition, the International Dry-Farming Congress at Tulsa, Oklahoma, October 22 to November 1, will have its boulevard of amusements and concessions. In this instance it will be known as the "Frying Trail," bringing to mind the historical "Tour of the Fins" by Washington Irving in 1800.

Washington Irving passed through the present townsite of Tulsa on this tour and camped on the Long City hills overlooking the Arkansas river and valley.

On the Irving Trail will be assembled the greatest aggregation of high class shows and wholesome amusement ever seen in Oklahoma. The attractions will line both sides of the trail, and at night the boulevard fun and frolic will be a blaze of electric illumination.

Among the feature attractions on the avens will be one of the greatest carnival companies in America; a wonderful congress of cowboys, cowgirls and Indians participating in the sports and pastimes of frontier life in the west, and a typical Osage Indian village, containing in primitive surroundings hundreds of men, women and children of this richest tribe of Indians on earth.

Flashing uniforms and martial music will also be marked features of the Congress and Exposition. One of the best concert bands in the country will furnish daily music. The United States government is sending a military band of forty pieces from Fort Sill, Oklahoma, one of the finest military bands in the service, to Tulsa for the entire ten days. A big contingent of United States troops from Fort Smith, Arkansas, will form a military escort to visiting governors, senators, congressmen and other dignitaries and will be seen in full maneuvers on the exposition grounds.

You will never know the significance of the term 'iron dollars' until you have carried the big wheels around in your pocket," he continued. "And you will doubtless never carry the cumbersome coin as long as the good-natured western brother consents to deal with that part of the currency. In the two months that I have been in the east I haven't had my hands on an 'iron dollar,' and I'm not homesick for the sight of one. When I return I am going to try to carry enough paper to last me until I come back again."
